

Buddhist Social Work Moves Towards a New Global Level!

The ARIISW has been involved in Buddhist social work research as one of its core projects since its establishment in 2016. The research findings have been featured in a recently published social work book.

As a new social work perspective, the definition of Buddhist social work that ARIISW has developed with researchers in Asia, as well as some of the articles by ARIISW's researchers, have been directly cited in a recent book by Henrickson (2022: 211-212).

This is a strong indication that findings from Buddhist social work studies have impacted on mainstream social work research worldwide. The ARIISW hopes to continue to contribute to Buddhist social work and international social work research.
